Learning Common

Letters with Words

In this book Important day-to-day words are linked to the Amharic alphabet. Just like the previous book try to learn the front and back cover of a paper in a week. Practicing with parents or friends helps the most. If you try to finish quickly, you may miss important practice time which is not advisable.

When you cannot remember the letters, go and review the previous book as often as you can.

In this workbook, you will see many pictures to help you associate the word. Picture worth ten thousand words, Chinese Proverb.

You remember a person with his crazy hair than his name.

As you already heard the words before you should not be afraid to speak or write them down. They are the foundation for your next step in reading a sentence.

You will be practicing saying the words and copy the Amharic word in the blank spaces.

Practice writing the Amharic words below each line

About the Author

I was born in Ethiopia to a farmer family. My brothers, Molla Melese and Desta Melese, provided me with basic learning opportunities at home as part of national education initiative in our village. Recognizing my interest in letters and numbers, my mother made a significant sacrifice, becoming a shepherd at age 45 to send me to school. This support allowed me to start elementary school at a second-grade level, forming the foundation for my academic achievements. I excelled through elementary and high school, eventually attending medical school, completing my residency, and practicing as an internal medicine doctor in New York. True to my name, I strive to make learning easy and enjoyable. I have shared this passion with eleventh-grade students after high school, nursing students during medical school, and during my practice and teaching roles at Gondar University, during my residency in Washington, DC, and with nurses preparing for the NCLEX. My goal is to positively impact as many children as possible, just as my mother and brothers did for me.

Thank you
